Biography

Jonathan Chandrasekhar is an insurance coverage and defense attorney in Georgia. His work focuses on commercial general liability and property matters. He serves as counsel to domestic and international insurers by providing coverage advice and preparing documents in litigation. Jonathan joined Fields Howell in 2021 after spending the summer of 2020 in the firm's Summer Associate Program.

Prior to joining Fields Howell, Jonathan served as a legal intern with Justice Sarah H. Warren of the Supreme Court of Georgia. In this position, he drafted briefs and memoranda for judicial opinions and conducted legal research on a variety of issues.

Jonathan is a 2021 graduate of Emory University School of Law. During his time there, he was a staff member of the Emory Bankruptcy Developments Journal, a member of the Chinese Law Student Association and South Asian Law Student Association, and served as the Social Chair of the Asian Pacific American Law Student Association. He was also a Teacher Assistant for Professor Dorothy A. Brown's Legislation and Regulation class. Before entering law school, Jonathan earned a B.S. in Statistics and a B.A. in Economics from the University of California, Davis.
